There appears to be no mention of curtailing the paving over of front gardens for parking purposes. Although the public should seek planning permission, often they do not or they infringe regulations. The loss of front gardens adds to flooding risks and you should be planning to actively police this activity.

With reference to hard landscaping why are you permitting so many crossovers and front garden parking spaces? Many of these appear without planning permission, are not chased up, and when they do go through the planning process your own planning guidelines appear to be flouted. Paving over of front gardens contributes to local flooding while at the same time being detrimental to wildlife and generally destroying the greening of residential areas.
