

Postcard to Home

In June 1948 the Empire Windrush arrived at Tilbury Docks, Essex carrying hundreds of people from the Caribbean. Some had been to Britain before whilst others came to the country for the first time.

Imagine you are one of the passengers arriving in Britain for the first time.

How would it have felt? What would have been different to home? What would you tell your family back at home?

Imagine you made the journey to Britain and write a postcard home to describe your experience.

A large white rectangular area with a red scalloped border, intended for writing a postcard. A vertical line is drawn on the right side, and three horizontal lines are drawn below it, indicating where to write the message.
