NATIONAL INSURANCE

Whether you're from the UK, the European Union, or anywhere else in the world, you need a National Insurance Number to work legally in the UK.

When you have a job, National Insurance is taken from your wages by the Government before you get paid. Your payslip will show this. If you have moved to the UK already, you may have a National Insurance number printed on the back of your biometric residence permit. If you do not have a National Insurance Number, you must apply.

How to apply:

You can only apply once you are in the UK. But you can start work before your National Insurance number arrives if you can prove you can work in the UK.

To apply, please call the National Insurance number application line:

 0800 141 2075 (Monday to Friday, 8am – 6pm)

RIGHT TO WORK IN THE UK

You will need a visa and/or a work permit before starting employment in the UK.

CONTRACTS

There should always be a contract between an employer and employee. It is not legal to be paid cash-in-hand.

You also have legal rights at work, including:

- Written terms of employment
- An itemised pay statement
- Parental leave
- Compensation for being made redundant
- A right not to be unfairly dismissed

Zero hours contracts

Zero hours contracts do not specify how many hours you will be required to work. The contract says that instead of working a specific number of hours per week, you must be ready to work whenever you are asked.

If you are on a zero-hour contract, you are allowed to do other work too

Key time contracts

Key time contracts are those where you are guaranteed some work but are not guaranteed regular hours each week

Agency workers

You are an agency worker if you have a contract with an agency, but you work temporarily for an employer. You may also be called a 'temp'.

Employment rights for agency workers:

- receive the relevant National Minimum Wage and National Living Wage

- pay should be agreed before an assignment begins

After 12 weeks in a job, an agency worker must receive the same pay as staff directly employed by the company unless they are on a 'pay between assignments' contract

This includes: basic pay, holiday pay, individual performance-related bonuses, commission, overtime pay, allowances for working shifts or unsociable hours

What rights do agency workers not have?

If you are an agency worker, you do not have the right to:

- Claim unfair dismissal if you are sacked without notice or good cause
- Claim statutory redundancy pay
- Claim maternity, paternity, adoption and parental leave
- A written statement of main terms and conditions of employment

PAY

The UK has a legal National Minimum Wage workers should be paid depending on their age. This amount changes every April.

Year	23 and over	21 to 22	18 to 20	Under 18	Apprentice
April 2022	£9.50	£9.18	£6.83	£4.81	£4.81

Your PAYSLIP will show how much you have earned during the pay period, and which deductions have been made.

TAX

If you have just started a new job, you might pay tax through an emergency tax code. This could mean you get less money than you should until HM Revenue and Customs updates its records. Normally this will only be for a month or two at the most.

If you have been in your job for more than 3 months and think your employer has taken too much money for tax, you will need to check your tax code and let HMRC know if it is wrong on GOV.UK.

Please visit: <https://www.gov.uk/tax-codes>

Your pay will be adjusted so you pay the right amount of tax over the tax year.

SICK PAY

You can check if you are legally entitled to sick pay here:

<https://www.gov.uk/statutory-sick-pay>

MATERNITY LEAVE

You are entitled to maternity leave if you are an employee. You are not entitled to maternity leave if you:

- Work for an agency
- Are a casual worker
- Are on a zero-hours contract

Your maternity leave will last for a year unless you tell your employer you want to return earlier. It cannot last longer than a year.

If you think your employer has not paid you statutory pay you are entitled to, you should contact HM Revenue and Customs for advice on what to do next.
