Celebrating Pride

Great Get Together

Wood Green's Architecture

It's been a busy couple of months, and this edition of Haringey People highlights many of the achievements of this fledgling administration.

Last month, the Cabinet decided to withdraw from the Haringey Development Vehicle (HDV) procurement. The final decision was taken after having weighed up the demerits and risks of progressing with the HDV, against the potential benefits of the project. Clearly the current administration takes a fundamentally different position from the previous one on this matter. We are confident that the decision not to proceed is the correct one taken at the correct time and we will now be seeking to draw a line under this chapter and proceed in earnest with our pledge to build social housing on our own land and deliver 1000 new council homes over the next 4 years.

We are also committed to ensuring that there are more affordable – genuinely affordable – homes built in our borough and we are working constructively with a number of partners to make this possible. We also joined the 100% club with all of our schools Ofsted rated as good or outstanding, agreed to set up a wholly owned development company, got funding for our Connected Communities project, and took decisions on both Broadwater Farm and Osborne Grove.

Furthermore, we are about to begin the consultation on a programme that enhances financial support for many of the poorest families in our borough by consulting on a revised council tax reduction scheme (CTRS).

I promised Haringey residents that we would make our borough cleaner, greener, safer and fairer. Another one of the key commitments we made to you, was that as a council we would listen more.

When we said it, we meant it, and our Fairness Commission went live on the 19th July to do exactly that. I have asked Cllr Zena Brabazon, Cabinet Member for Civic Services, to chair the Commission and she has co-opted Professor Paul Watt, a professor of Urban Studies at Birkbeck University to co-chair it with her. The commission also includes many local people and reflects the diversity of Haringey, bringing together a range of skills and areas of expertise from people who truly understand the area.

Over the coming months, you'll have the chance to put your ideas forward on how we make our borough more equal. In fact, you can already share your views online on our website. Public engagement sessions will be held between October 2018 and March 2019, with a final report and practical recommendations expected to be put to Haringey Council in summer 2019. We're going to be looking at areas such as jobs and employment, finance, communities and neighbourhoods, housing, health and wellbeing and children and education.

So I invite you to get involved over the forthcoming months.

There is a genuine commitment here to make Haringey a fair and equal borough – but we need to do that in partnership with you. We are not just committed to working for you, we are equally committed to working with you.

Cllr Joseph Ejiofor
Leader, Haringey Council

News

Haringey Goes Wild

Almost 2,000 children and young people from schools across Haringey took to the stage at the world-famous Royal Albert Hall to showcase their musical talents.

Musical extravaganza Haringey Goes Wild for the Royal Albert Hall celebrated youth, culture, the natural world and music.

The sell-out audience was treated to performances from Haringey's Symphony Orchestra, Big Band and Guitar Groups, as well as the Haringey Young Musicians training and intermediate groups, and new pieces by local composers Thomas Gregory and Ty Lowe.

The highlight was the world premieres of two entirely new compositions commissioned from local composers Kate Stiltz and Laura Forrest-Hay, celebrating the natural environment and wildlife in the borough.

Connected Communities

New migrants will be given a helping hand to make Haringey their home after the council's pioneering integration programme won government funding.

Connected Communities, funded by the Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government, will help migrants to settle more quickly into life in Haringey, offering support for five key challenges:

- Understanding life in the UK and how to navigate public services
- Housing
- Employment
- Parenthood
- Integration in the local community

The support will enable people to improve their English and build wider support networks, helping them feel more at home and play a more active role in their local communities.

The project will focus on wards with the highest levels of inward migration and highest levels of deprivation.

Connected Communities was developed following research that showed that local migrants' shared common aspirations to be healthy, work, have a secured home and provide a future for their children.

Bright future for Osborne Grove

Osborne Grove nursing home could be kept and even expanded, after Haringey Council's Cabinet decided to halt its closure.

Cabinet agreed it would be best to keep open the nursing home in Upper Tollington Park, Stroud Green, and explore options for creating additional and better care provision on the site.

The aim is to create first-class in-house care facilities for the borough, working with public sector partners and stakeholders to meet demands for care services.

Residents currently living at Osborne Grove have been guaranteed that they can stay in the home both now and if any development or expansion takes place in the future.

The council will now be looking in greater detail at innovative models of care.

Haringey Development Vehicle

Haringey's Cabinet have decided not to proceed with the Haringey Development Vehicle.

Leader Cllr Joseph Ejiofor said: "The preference of this administration, as stated in our manifesto, is to build council homes on our own land. We firmly believe that what is currently public land should remain in public ownership. We are committed to building new, affordable homes over the next four years - including the delivery of 1,000 new council homes - and we start from the principle the council should be delivering those homes itself."

My Haringey

Finding local services at the click of a mouse is easier than ever with the My Haringey online mapping service.

My Haringey helps residents quickly and easily find information relevant to them based on their location in the borough.

You can simply pop in your postcode to pinpoint services and info such as planning applications, parking zones, schools and local councillors.

You can access My Haringey from the home page of the council website at www.haringey.gov.uk

Rogue landlord rumbled

A rogue landlord who illegally converted a Crouch End house into nine cramped flats, has been ordered to pay back more than £300,000 in ill-gotten income.

Andreas Lytras converted a property in Ridge Road into nine tiny individual flats without planning permission, and continued to rent them out despite being instructed not to by Haringey Council.

At a hearing at Wood Green Crown Court, Mr Lytras pleaded guilty to non-compliance with an enforcement notice and was issued with a confiscation order demanding he pay more than £310,000 – equivalent to his profit on the flats. He was also fined £5,000 and ordered to pay Haringey Council's £4,000 court costs.

Mr Lytras was given three months to pay the money in full, and could face a prison sentence if he fails to comply.

Once paid, around one-third of the confiscation order will go to Haringey Council, with the remainder to the Home Office and the courts under the Proceeds of Crime Act.

Broadwater Farm commitments

Residents in two Broadwater Farm Estate blocks are being consulted about the future of their homes, after buildings surveys revealed significant structural works are needed.

Both Tangmere and Northolt blocks will need to undergo major strengthening works or be demolished and rebuilt to ensure their long-term safety for tenants. A decision on whether to strengthen or rebuild the blocks will only be taken following full consultation with residents.

People living in Tangmere block will be found new homes in the coming months while the future of their block is considered, and those living in Northolt block will be found new homes in 2019 while the future of their block is also considered.

The council has made a series of commitments to residents, including:

- Working with affected secure tenants and leaseholders to ensure housing offers are tailored to their needs
- Offering every resident a home in the borough while works are carried out on their block or new replacement homes built on the estate
- A guaranteed right to return to Broadwater Farm once new homes have been built or structural improvements made
- At least the same number of council owned homes at council rents on the estate

A rosebush for the Windrush generation

Two rosebushes have been planted alongside the Windrush memorial plaque at West Green Common, to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the arrival of the SS Empire Windrush, which brought the first Caribbean immigrants to the UK.

Haringey has a proud Caribbean heritage and the space at the Tottenham park was first dedicated to Caribbean settlers in the area in 1998, with a special plaque alongside a rose garden.

The ceremony held in June saw Haringey Council Leader Cllr Joseph Ejiofor and Mayor of Haringey, Cllr Gina Adamou gather with local residents and dignitaries for a planting ceremony to return roses to the site.

Council's affordable homes company

A new housing company owned by Haringey Council has been given the go-ahead, paving the way for more council homes in the borough.

The new Wholly Owned Company will ramp up the delivery of quality new-build council-owned homes, with a particular focus on providing homes for the more than 9,000 families on the council's housing register, including 3,000 homeless households in temporary accommodation. The aim of the Wholly Owned Company is to increase significantly the supply of housing in the borough, particularly on council-owned land.

Haringey's Cabinet agreed to set up the Wholly Owned Company. It came as Cabinet also decided not to proceed with the Haringey Development Vehicle.

Working for a fairer borough

A group of community and faith leaders, experts, local residents and politicians are coming together to help Haringey become a fairer and more equal borough for our residents, communities and businesses.

The Fairness Commission will be made up of around 20 people - many of whom live in the borough and come from a range of backgrounds.

Residents can share their views online about ways of tackling inequality and what fairness means to them. Public engagement sessions will be held between October 2018 and March 2019, with a final report and practical recommendations expected to be put to Haringey Council in summer 2019.

Pride of place

With rainbow flags and marches in the sunshine – groups from across the borough celebrated Pride season in style this summer.

Wise Thoughts, the BAME LGBT+ charity based in Wood Green, marched in the Pride in London parade, as did Tottenham Hotspur LGBT+ supporters' group the Proud Lilywhites. Council staff attended Pride to support the community and campaign for LGBT+ equality, wearing Haringay T-shirts. And Haringey Vanguard – who share the story of BAME LGBT+ activism in the borough from the 70s – had a stall there and at UK Black Pride.

Wise Thoughts' artistic director Niranjan Kamatkar said: "It was fabulous to participate in the parade, once again this year, and we are happy that we were able to reflect the diversity within the LGBT+ community of Haringey."

To mark the Pride season, Haringey Council Leader Cllr Joseph Ejiofor signed the Stonewall 'Come Out for LGBT' pledge, vowing to continue to battle for LGBT+ equality.

Top of the Class

It's official – 100 per cent of Haringey's schools are now Good or Outstanding

Haringey now joins an elite group of five boroughs where every school has a good or outstanding rating from Ofsted. With a total of 86 schools, Haringey has a greater number of schools than any other borough with 100 per cent.

The news has been welcomed by schools across the borough.

Patrick Cozier, chair of secondary school heads in Haringey said: "It's an incredible achievement and one that has come about because of the excellent and dedicated staff that work across all the schools in our wonderful Borough. We work hard within our schools, but we also support each other as a community of schools and work well collaboratively and successfully and it shows"

Maria Kokotsis, chair of primary school heads in Haringey said: "This is testament to the hard work, passion and devotion from every single person that works in all of our schools both paid and unpaid. What must also be recognised is the positive impact of the strong partnerships our schools have developed – congratulations to all for this amazing achievement."

Haringey's schools have gone from strength to strength in recent years, with a range of improvements, including:

- Among the best progress nationally from Key Stage 2 to GCSE
- In the top quartile in London for early years children achieving a 'good level of development,' and more than 90 per cent of early years settings rated Good or Outstanding
- The best GCSE results in the country for looked after children in 2016.

A number of new programmes have also been set up to drive up standards, including the Haringey Education Partnership – a new schools led approach to improving and supporting the borough's schools – and the Haringey STEM commission, which is designed to improve access to Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths.

Tiverton Primary School in Tottenham was the latest school to achieve a Good rating at its Ofsted inspection.

Inspectors praised staff for being alert to children's needs and providing effective support, as well as offering exciting learning opportunities and creating an atmosphere of mutual respect and hard work.

Headteacher Resham Mirza said: "We are delighted at this recognition from Ofsted of the hard work, dedication and resilience of the staff, pupils, families and governors that form the Tiverton community. We will build on our success so that we can continue to provide an enriched, stimulating learning environment in which our pupils can reach their best potential."

➡ This is testament to the hard work, passion and devotion from every single person that works in all of our schools. ➡

BECAUSE THERE'S ONLY ONE YOU

A league of their own

Haringey Borough FC just can't stop getting promoted – and they get a kick out of being a club for the community too.

Led by manager Tom Loizou, Borough have soared up the leagues since he took over nine years ago. They went up again last season and now they're in the Bostik Premier.

Tom, who once managed Leyton Orient, is the only full-time member of staff, but has a strong team of volunteers around him – including his daughter and his fullback son Andy, who also drives the minibus.

"It's like a big family here," says Tom. "We're trying to create a nice atmosphere so that everyone feels welcome. The fans have been unbelievable. When we went up, the chairman, Aki Achillea, was acting just like a fan. The players had huge smiles and brought their kids on the pitch, players were mingling with the fans – that's what I want for the club.

My personal mission is for everyone to know Haringey Borough."

Coles Park – the Borough ground on White Hart Lane in Tottenham – played host to the CONIFA World Football Cup in June and eyes from across the globe were on Haringey.

International teams that are not part of FIFA came to Haringey and Karpatalya - representing a Hungarian minority living in western Ukraine - won the whole tournament.

Tom, who is also the groundsman, had a huge job on his hands – from cleaning the stands to getting the burgers in. He says: "I brush the pitch twice a week, I do the weeding around the club grounds. After every game I sweep the terraces. I unblock the toilets, I put up the nets, I do all the maintenance and painting. It's the only way the club survives."

Haringey Borough play a big role in the community – from working with community payback to supporting talented young players from Barnet and Southgate College, in partnership with the Tottenham Hotspur Foundation. Tom says: "We're giving young people opportunities. Players didn't used to want to come here – now my phone doesn't stop ringing."

Haringey Borough have a range of teams, from men's and women's firsts to men's U18s and U23s. There's an amazing atmosphere at the club – laughter, jokes and a lot of hard work. As Tom sweeps the pitch, he laughs: "This is passion." Let's hope Borough clean up again this season.

A great get together

Haringey residents took to the streets again this year to celebrate community spirit at the annual Great Get Together.

Held in honour of murdered MP Jo Cox, the nationwide event celebrates Britain's diversity, driven by Jo's belief that we have more in common than things which divides us.

The special weekend in June saw communities across the borough join together to organise their own events in parks, community venues and the streets of Haringey.

This year's activities included street parties, a food bank picnic, play street games, roller-skating, music, dodgeball, giant football, and loads more fun.

Events were held across the borough, including Bounds Green, Priory Park, Cranleigh Road, Selby Road, Doncaster Gardens, Lordship Recreation Ground, Hornsey High Street and Paignton Park.

Young people at the heart of Haringey's Mayoral year

Haringey's new Mayor will champion the rights of young people with special needs throughout her year of fundraising.

Cllr Gina Adamou, who was sworn in as Mayor this summer, has chosen Haringey-based charities Ambitious About Autism and John Dewey Specialist College as the joint beneficiaries of her Mayor's Special Fund proceeds.

Ambitious About Autism is a national charity for children and young people with autism. It runs the specialist TreeHouse School in Muswell Hill and Ambitious College, which has a campus in Tottenham.

Ambitious About Autism's Director of External Affairs, Alison Worsley, said the charity was "hugely honoured" to have the Mayor's backing, adding:

"When we set up TreeHouse School 21 years ago, we did so with the ambition of offering children and young people with autism better opportunities to learn, thrive and achieve. Since then we have grown our education services and wider support - helping thousands of young people with autism from the start of school, right through to college.

"Sadly many children with autism still face a battle to access a good education and the right support at school - which can have hugely damaging consequences on everything from young people's mental health to career prospects. We're looking forward to working with the Mayor to raise awareness of these issues and secure change."

John Dewey Specialist College, based in Coburg Road, Wood Green, offers continuing education for young adults from Haringey and surrounding boroughs with severe or profound intellectual disabilities and other complex needs.

Dr Matthew Griffiths, Chair of Governors, said: "The need for our provision is growing. Currently we have more applications from potential students than we can accommodate, and we hope to be able to expand in the near future to enable more young people to benefit from our unique offer.

"We are delighted to have the Mayor's support for our work with these very vulnerable and often marginalised young people who need such specialised support and care to enable them to gain skills which others can take for granted."

Mayor Adamou said: "I want to try to make a difference in the education and support of young people with autism, a range of learning disabilities and other complex needs, as well as helping their families."

Haringey Literature Live

The write stuff

With the growth of social media, texting and Twitter, some say the art of writing is dead. However, that's not the case for literary organisation Haringey Literature Live, based at the Chocolate Factory arts and media complex in Wood Green.

Haringey Literature Live (HLL) works with a group of talented writer-tutors who are committed to bringing back writing to the masses. Now in its fifth year, HLL offers courses on all sorts of writing from short stories to memoir, poetry, novels and journalism. The group offers a friendly and supportive environment for writers to develop their skills.

Founder and Wood Green local Kate Pemberton created HLL when she approached Collage Arts (based in the Chocolate Factory) to help them restart their literary provision. Kate says: "One of the most exciting moments for us was Collage Arts giving us our own HQ - a wonderful large studio we call the Writing Room. It is a home from home for local writers, full of books to borrow, a relaxing sitting area to share a coffee with fellow would-be writers, and large tables to get on with lots of productive work!"

The writing group is diverse, with students from all backgrounds, ranging in age from 18 to 95 years old, attending weekly classes. Recently, some of these students have gone on to write their own success stories.

Lucy Nabijou is a gifted writer and campaigner who writes about her experiences travelling in war torn parts of the world. When she's not writing Lucy also runs a refugee charity in Haringey (www.haringeywelcome.org). Another student, Rashda Alvi, who is in her 80s, came to the UK in the 1970s and is writing a novel about her experiences of London at that time after fleeing partition in Pakistan.

Courses run throughout the year and are supported by the Arts Council England, Haringey Council and Collage Arts. The autumn timetable will be packed with new and exciting courses on poetry, the novel, life-writing, masterclasses and much more. Students can also 'drop-in' during the week for an inspiring discussion group on Mondays, a reading group on Tuesdays, and their popular 'Feedback Fridays' where students get a chance to share extracts of their work.

If you've got the writing bug and want to get your creative juices flowing, visit www.haringeyliteraturelive.com for more information.

The Haringey hostel helping people find homes of their own

Emmanuel Bejedi has been living at YMCA North London's Crouch End hostel since 2016.

When his relationship with his mother broke down five years ago, Emmanuel, 26, found himself sleeping rough on London's streets, seeking shelter in bus stations and taking refuge in a Holloway night shelter.

Now the chance of renting a place to live could finally be within reach for Emmanuel, thanks to an innovative supper club at the hostel run by London-based social enterprise Fat Macy's.

When Emmanuel was first invited to take part in a supper club event, he wasn't sure it was for him. But that all changed once he stepped foot inside. "When I got there, it was an amazing feeling," he says. "Even on my first day helping out in the kitchen, it felt that it was another family I had."

The supper club offers young people living in temporary accommodation the chance to work towards a rented home. Participants are offered intensive training courses, including food hygiene and an introduction to cooking, before working at a Fat Macy's supper club.

Each trainee earns £10 an hour that is placed in a trust fund to help them save towards future rental fees.

Meg Doherty, who set up Fat Macy's in 2016, says the process allows people to learn and build their confidence in an inclusive environment. "So much of it is about trying to get people to understand that it's their life and they can change it with the right support," she says.

Emmanuel also now has a part-time job in a pub and hopes that eventually he'll be in a position to rent his own home.

"Sometimes I ask myself where I am now compared to what I was coming from," he says. "I was struggling, and it was not easy. This was a big life change for me. But even if I get my own place, it wouldn't stop me from coming here to help out – I will always want to part of it."

Showcasing Wood Green at the London Festival of Architecture

A special treasure hunt winding a trail through architectural gems and creative highlights helped shine a light on Wood Green's cultural clout.

The treasure hunt, part of the London Festival of Architecture, saw local residents scouring the streets of N22 for clues hidden across a host of interesting locations each a stone's throw from the bustle of Wood Green's High Road.

Highlights included the Chocolate Factory; New River Village; Blue House Yard; the Moselle River; Green Rooms Hotel, and Collage Arts, with creative tenants, artists and local business owners on hand to greet visitors and explain a little more about their role in the Wood Green scene.

Treasure hunter Cressida Miller said: "It's a lovely social event. I came here on my own and it's been so nice to meet lots of difference people. I love waterways, so it's been a treat to see the New River Village, which I never knew was here."

One clue led to the "swinging shed window" at Blue House Yard, home to Sokko print shop and design studio, where the owners were on hand to help visitors make their own card on the vintage print machines.

Sokko Co-owner Raquel Serafim said: "Lots of families have come in and they're amazed to see we do the traditional form of printing."

At Collage Arts in the Chocolate Factory, Jason Doorbeegan and Kelly Briggs were leading a sweet making workshop, inviting people to decorate their own sugary treats – dusting delicious flying saucers with coloured icing sugar or jazzing up peppermint creams.

"People seem to love this activity and some stay for up to half an hour, designing and chatting away," said Kelly.

Bounds Green resident and architect Gabriela Martino said: "It was a really good day and I hope there is more of this kind of thing in future. It's really opened my eyes to lots of lovely streets and places I haven't seen before."

Community at the heart of local funding

A host of Northumberland Park and Broadwater Farm community projects have landed funding after winning votes from local residents.

At two Community Voting Days, local residents decided who would receive funding of up to £5,000 to deliver activities, events and services to directly benefit their community.

Northumberland Park

Nine projects each earned a share of a £40,000 kitty at the Northumberland Park Community Voting Day on Saturday 9 June at Duke's Aldridge Academy.

Amongst the successful bidders was the Lorenzo Kitchen Garden Project, which will use its £5,000 grant to create a sensory garden for the supported housing scheme.

Bidder Alice Williams said: "I found it a very moving event and touching event. To see the community coming together like this was fantastic.

"The award means everything to us and will allow us to give opportunities to our vulnerable people and also allow the community to be more involved with us. One of the gentlemen who presented with me is sight-impaired and he has been practising and practising what he was going to say because he couldn't read any notes and standing up there meant a lot to him."

Broadwater Farm

The first ever Broadwater Farm Community Voting Day took place at The Willow Primary School on Saturday 30 June. More than 100 people packed into the primary school's hall to listen to presentations from 29 projects. They were bidding for funding from a £75,000 pot.

Residents awarded 16 groups full funding for their projects and two received partial funding.

"I am so happy and excited and can't wait to get started!" said Elizabeth

Lahav of Streetz Ahead who won money for two projects: Dance Giants and Pan in the Park. "With Dance Giants we'll be working in this school to help children at risk of being excluded. And in Pan in the Park we'll be teaming up with Tottenham Theatre to produce a fantastic summer theatre project."

Festival of cycling and walking

Residents across Haringey, Islington and Hackney geared up for the sixth annual Festival of Cycling and Walking.

Around 2,000 people took part in the fantastic family fun day in Finsbury Park, the best turnout yet.

Enthusiasts were treated to a range of cycling and walking related activities, including bike maintenance sessions, fun walks around the park, a smoothie-making bike and advice and tips from cycling experts.

Haringey Police were on site to tag bicycles with security markings and teach owners how to keep their cycles safe, while cycle skills lessons were offered to less confident riders.

A major highlight of the day was the 'Italian job' – a 100km cycling challenge to Little Chalfont and back, with a rest stop at Fillipetto's deli cafe. Riders were encouraged to showcase their Italian spirit, with a prize awarded for the 'most Italian' style.

For mini adventurers, older people or those who wanted a shorter challenge, there was also the 5km Saddle and Sole ride which travelled to the Emirates Stadium.

Angela from Hornsey said: "It's been a great family day out, inclusive of all ages."

Andrew from Hackney said: "It was a fun day with my whole family. Events like this festival are what the community needs to come together and be more proactive."

Ana from Islington said: "What a great initiative! As a newcomer to London it helped me feel a sense of community. I got my bike fixed and registered and I even used the smoothie bike to make a delicious smoothie."

Gestetner - A Lost Art?

The Gestetner factory once stood in Broad Lane in Tottenham for over 80 years, where it produced its world-famous duplicator machines. These machines, a precursor to the modern day printer, revolutionised offices around the world and changed our very concept of print.

The art group Alt Går Bra have been using Gestetner machines for the past four years, carrying out the exciting and arduous task of repairing and maintaining the machines and learning how to use the many tools to create artwork. They have so far been unsuccessful in finding artists and mechanics from the time the factory was in operation who once used the machines. Finding them would help keep the knowledge about this important technology alive.

Alt Går Bra are therefore undertaking an art and oral history project about the Gestetner machines and factory to ensure this art and technology is not lost. Supported by the Heritage Lottery Fund, Arts Council England and Haringey Council, this research and its history will be shown as part of an exhibition at Bruce Castle Museum, from 29 September 2018 to January 2019.

Over the past year, the group have carried out research at Haringey Archive at Bruce Castle Museum, which houses records, photographs and a few machines relating to the factory. The in-house magazines produced by Gestetner has helped them to learn how these machines were used. They are also a testament to how important the local community were in the production of the machines, and how proud Gestetner was of its links to Tottenham.

If you remember the Gestetner factory and machines, Alt Går Bra would love to hear from you if you have any stories to tell. Please email: agbmimeograph@gmail.com

Open House Weekend - Ferry Lane Estate

Sunday, September 23

Celebrate Ferry Lane Estate's 40th anniversary by paying it a visit during Open House Weekend. Considered high-density housing when built in 1978, the popular mix of houses and low-rise flats lies adjacent to the River Lee. Built originally by the Greater London Council, the estate transferred to Haringey Council in 1982 and is now managed by Homes for Haringey.

Ferry Lane is undoubtedly a success story. The estate is popular, crime is low, people feel safe, transport links are excellent, the environment is pleasant, with plenty of trees and open green spaces. There is a thriving residents association and a good primary school. Residents come from all over the globe but settle and, generally, get on well.

When the estate was built the site was a backwater, surrounded by partly derelict industrial land. Now it is on the edge of major redevelopment and a neighbour to the newly opened Walthamstow Wetlands. It has been included in the Open House London weekend so that the role of architecture and layout in making the estate a success can be considered.

The residents association has arranged three guided tours with an architecture researcher as part of the Open House Weekend. Bookings are not required. For further information, contact Lorna.reith@btinternet.com or call 07973426337.

Open House Weekend London is the world's largest architecture festival giving free public access to 800+ buildings, walks, talks and tours over one weekend in September each year. This year's event takes place 22-23 September.
