Subject: Pinkham Wood

I am the founder of River of Flowers which creates wildflower areas in cities to help our native pollinators (bees and butterflies) survive. Cities cannot afford to lose any more areas of wildness because so much has been destroyed over the past 50 years. River of Flowers is not about 'pretty' flowers, it's about the preservation of our food supply. Without pollinators a third of what we eat would not be grown. I object to the proposed changes to Pinkham Wood. An alternative that is less damaging to the environment needs to be sought. It's a question of legacy. Short term measures now will mean protracted agony for our descendants. Kathryn Lwin
