

Top illustration

Mountview Road, 1949. Small gardens such as these improve immeasurably any built-up area. They are a boon to the aged and the invalid, or to the mother with a pram who so often cannot endure a long walk to a park.

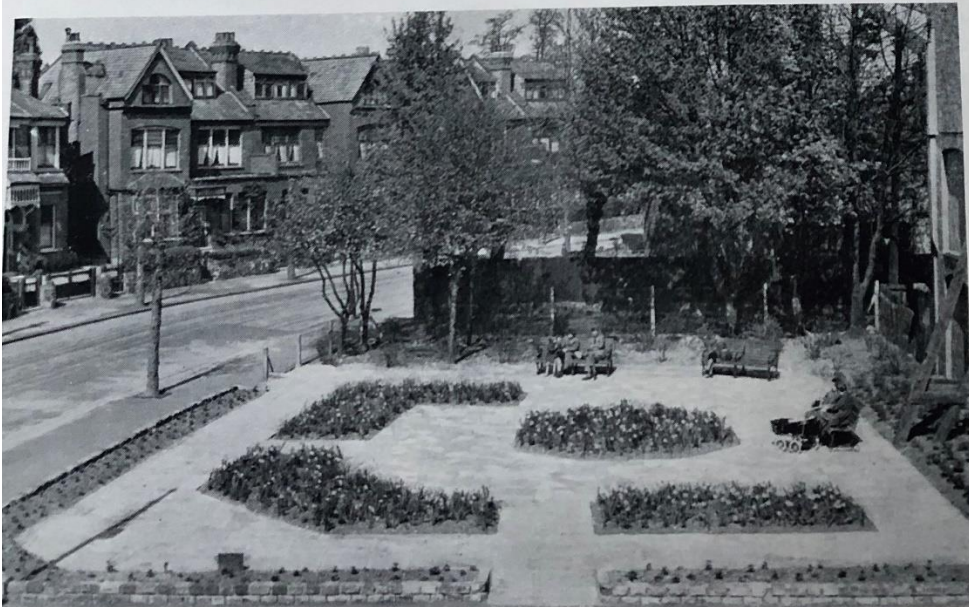

Centre illustration

Haringey Park, 1949. The cost of creating and maintaining public gardens is not inconsiderable, but the money is well invested and dividends in health and happiness are beyond computation.

The Gardens of To-day

“Bare Winter suddenly was changed to Spring.”

SHELLEY.

Lower illustration

For many years our people may have to suffer the ugliness of thousands of bombed sites throughout the country. Meanwhile, they become dumping grounds for rubbish, unauthorized car parks and an eyesore to the community.

Princes Parade site shows a practical use of a bombed site.

