Event details:	10 years ago music producer Adrian Stone embarked on a journey of discovery to trace his family tree and reclaim

	his heritage. The conversations began with his immediate family after his beloved mother was taken very ill. He was seeking a way to connect better with his family. As he explored the gaps in his family history, branching out to over 6000 ancestors, three continents and over 250 years, he made some remarkable discoveries and found his African ancestor named Ebo Venus from the Igbo tribe, who came to Jamaica on a slave ship in late 1700s. Drawing upon his own personal experience of tracing his ancestry and his desire to share his passion for genealogy, Adrian has launched this unique series of genealogy workshops entitled Tracing Your Windrush Roots to help participants find their African Caribbean roots from the Windrush generation and beyond. This practical workshop will offer you the opportunity to search your own family tree and assist in developing an understanding of basic genealogical techniques. You will also be shown how to effectively locate and analyse key sources along with the potential of DNA testing as applied to genealogy. Moreover, this event will help you add historical context to your African Caribbean family history and discuss how to record and communicate research findings. The workshops are suitable for people at beginner to intermediate level. Computers will be available for use at the workshop. Bring along your family tree and let's explore together!

Event details:	Looking far back beyond the arrival of the Windrush in 1948, this third programme from Britain on Film on Tour explores the vital history of black Britain throughout the 20th century on film. Bringing together films spanning 1901 to 1985 and taken from many different regions of the UK, it offers incredibly rare, little-seen and valuable depictions of black British life on screen. Watch miners in the collieries of Edwardian Lancashire and Yorkshire; and soldiers from across the Empire joining the services to fight for King and 'mother country' in World War I. See rare colour footage of multi-racial Cardiff in 1957, a Nigerian wedding in Cornwall in 1964, and touching interviews with black school leavers in 1965; witness growing racial tensions on a Liverpool housing estate and in New Cross, London; communities in

	search of their roots and partying on the streets of Notting Hill during Carnival. Revealing new voices from across a century of vast and turbulent social change in the UK, Britain on Film: Black Britain is not just an important educative tool – offering audiences the chance to explore stories of migration, community and the struggle against inequality – but also an opportunity to celebrate vivid black British life and culture on screen. With thanks to Independent Cinema.
